Naga Bakehouse is a wood-fired bakery, gristmill and micro-farm hidden in the hills of southwestern Vermont. Naga stands for (NA)tural (G)rain (A)lchemy. The definition of alchemy is the magic of changing something simple into something special.

Our three prong mission is to create “Good Food”, to regenerate the land and to reinvigorate our rural economy by shortening the distance between the farmer, the miller, the baker and the eater.

We grow many of our own ingredients and work with regional farmers who grow our grains for us. These grains include whole wheat, rye and buckwheat, as well as heirloom and Ancient varieties; all grown regionally. We grind the grains into flour then bake a variety of wood-fired Artisan stuffed and flat breads; both sweet and savory.

Imagine, stuffed blueberry ricotta or garlic knots with greens, garlic and parmesan; spinach feta or black olive and goat cheese! Instead of calling them calzones and pizzas; we call them stuffed breads and flatbreads. They're filling, nutrient dense and delicious, freshly baked for each day! Come check us out!
